CSFS' Mobile Diabetes Telemedicine Clinic provides mobile diabetes prevention and intervention education, checkups and testing in communities all across Northern British Columbia.

Creating wellness together.

Mobile Diabetes Telemedicine Clinic

Our clinical team travels to First Nations communities across Northern BC providing diabetes care.

Our diabetes educators deliver diabetes prevention and management education, point of care blood testing, eye exams, foot exams, medication reviews and endocrinologist-reviewed recommendations to your primary care provider and health clinic.

All children and adults are encouraged to get checked for diabetes when our team is in your community. We provide full assessments to those living with diabetes. The clinics also are a great way to learn more about diabetes and how you can manage your blood sugar (glucose levels).

Visit our clinic when we are in your community. We also take referrals from health clinics and/or doctors' offices. Identifying as First Nations is not a pre-requisite for this program.
